FRM-93121: Cannot find environment variable configuration file {0}.

Cause: One of the following occurred. (The first is by far the most likely.) Note that an envFile parameter may specify a relative path; if it was not found in the current directory, Forms will search for it in the directory that contains the Forms Servlet configuration file. 1. Type: ERROR

Impact: Session

FRM-93240: Multiple Forms applications cannot share an HTTP session.

Cause: A Forms application was launched in such a way that it attempted to share an HTTP session with an already running Forms application. This might result from one of the following:1. The user selected File, then New, then Browser Window (or Ctrl+N) in Internet Explorer while the servlet session was being tracked using cookies (that is, session cookies were enabled). In this case Forms does not support creating a new session for the second window.2. An application attempted to launch multiple Forms applications, and cookies were enabled in the Forms application.3. An application attempted to launch multiple Forms applications using POST, cookies were disabled in the Forms application, and the launching application specified the same cookie name as did the Forms application.

Action: Take action depending on the cause.1. No action is required.2. Disable cookies in the Forms application.3. Change the cookie name in the launching application or the Forms application. This can be accomplished via <cookie-name> under <session-descriptor> in the weblogic.xml deployment descriptor.

JBO-25013: Too many objects match the primary key {0}.

Cause: An attempt was made to add a newly fetched or created entity to the cache, but the new entity has the same primary key as an existing entity. The primary key must be unique for this entity type.

Action: Add more attributes to the key definition for the entity type, so that each row for this entity is uniquely identifiable. Or fix the primary key value so that this entity has a unique key identifier.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25014: Another user has changed the row with primary key {0}.

Cause: The database value does not match the cached value for this entity object. This could happen when another user or operation has committed modifications to the same entity row in the database. This exception can also be thrown if the 'equals' method on one of the domain type attributes in the entity fails.

Action: Choose from the following options: 1. Verify that another user or operation has not modified the same row in the database. If this entity has attributes of a domain type verify that the `equals()` method on these domains do not fail when comparing the existing cached value with the newly fetched value. 2. For any attributes/columns that are updated by the database, modify the entity attribute definition by selecting 'Refresh after update' on the Attribute Settings page of the Entity Object Wizard. 3. JBO-25030: Detail entity {0} with row key {1} cannot find or invalidate its owning entity.

Cause: No container entity was found for a detail entity in a composition association. This could occur if a nonexistent master key value was passed in during creation of a new detail entity instance, or if the foreign key value of this entity was modified so that it no longer matched any master entity.

Cause: The client attempted to access an attribute of a view which is mapped to an entity row, but the corresponding entity row is null. If the view object consists of multiple entity object bases and if the secondary entity object bases are reference-only, the entity rows could be null if the foreign key linking the primary entity to the secondary entity object is null.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25034: Row with handle {1} is not found in rowset {0}.

Cause: The client attempted to locate a row with a stale row handle. This error might be raised if the client tries to take a row out of one query collection and use its handle to find a row in another query collection. Note that if the client calls `executeQuery` on a rowset, it might receive a new query collection. Thus, this error might occur if the client retrieves a row from a rowset, takes its row handle, calls `executeQuery`, and then tries to locate the row using the saved handle. This exception might also be raised if a row reference is used across transaction boundaries and the row handle has become stale and hence the corresponding row cannot be found.

Action: Make sure that the row handle is not stale. One approach is to find the row again using its primary key before attempting to act on the row.

Level: 1

JBO-25035: The application module passivation store is invalid.

Cause: An application attempted to change an application module's passivation store after it had been initialized. The passivation store (Database, File or Memory) can only be initialized once. If the customer application logic has not specified a passivation store when the serialization framework is invoked, the passivation store is initialized by the framework.

Action: Check the client application logic for invocations of `ApplicationModuleImpl.setStoreForPassiveState` which are invoked after the application module passivation store has been initialized.

JBO-25037: Detail row set {0} is missing a master row set iterator for view link {1}, master view object {2}.

Cause: This row set is a detail in a master-detail relationship, but it is missing a master row set iterator. Most likely, this occurred because a master row set iterator was removed through a call to `removeMasterRowSetIterator()` and has not been replaced with an appropriate one.

Action: Call `setMasterRowSetIterator()` to provide a valid master row set iterator.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25038: Value {2} passed as parameter {1} to method {0} is invalid.

Cause: An attempt was made to invoke a business components method with an invalid parameter value.

Action: Refer to the documentation of error message JBO-25006 (EXC_INVALID_PARAMETER) for more information. The difference between this error message and EXC_INVALID_PARAMETER is that this version does not include an explanation. In general, Oracle recommends using JBO-25006 instead of JBO-25038.

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25042: Row of trans post listener handle {0} not found in list.

Cause: Entity row of the given handle is not found in transaction post listener list. Most likely cause of this error is as follows: the user requests certain operation. The operation tries to get access to the row in database. This fails for whatever reason (this exception's detail might have further information). The system tries to fix the problem at the entity level. It looks for the entity row in the transaction post listener list. The specified row is not found.

Action: Look at the details and see if the cause can be determined from them. Check to see if concurrent updates to database could have caused the problem.

JBO-25048: Operation {0} is invalid for a working set object.

Cause: This operation is invalid for this working set object. It might be because the operation doesn't make sense in batch mode, or because the batch communication mode (`WSApplicationModuleImpl.getBatchCommMode()`) does not allow this operation.

JBO-25051: Row of range index {1} is not found in RowSetIterator {0}.

Cause: The client has attempted to locate a row with a range index, but the Row Set Iterator's range does not have a row at the index. It might be that the range index is too big ( $\geq$  the range size), or that the range is at the bottom and the range index is beyond the last row of the Row Set. Or, the Row Set might have been reset because of operations like rollback and clear-cache. Hence, the range is empty and no row is found

Action: Make sure that the row set iterator is open and has rows in its range. Also, make sure that the range index falls between the first and the last row of the range.

Cause: This View Object is not Entity based, and its ManageRowsByKey flag is true. Yet, its key definition is empty. Restated, the user has asked for the View rows to be managed by keys, but the key definition is empty (which would produce empty keys for all rows).

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25065: Named where-clause parameter {0} does not belong to ViewObject {1}. It belongs to an object of type {2}.

Cause: An attempt was made to remove a named where-clause parameter. However, this where-clause parameter is owned by neither the RowSet nor the ViewObject. Therefore, the parameter cannot be removed.

JBO-25066: View Object {0} is based on an Entity built from Row Set. For such a View Object, cannot include QUERY_MODE_SCAN_DATABASE_TABLES in its query mode.

Cause: An attempt was made to include QUERY_MODE_SCAN_DATABASE_TABLES in the View Object's query mode (through a call to setQueryMode()). However, this View Object can perform query only through Entity Object. Hence, QUERY_MODE_SCAN_DATABASE_TABLES is inappropriate.

Action: The View Object is probably based on an Entity, which in turn is based on a RowSet (EntityDefOverRowSet). It is illegal to use QUERY_MODE_SCAN_DATABASE_TABLES for a View Object built on top of an Entity which is built over a Row Set. JBO-25068: Entity {0} has a base EO {1} with no discriminator, but base EO has rows in its cache. Cannot populate both caches.

Cause: An attempt was made to create a new instance of an Entity Row. However, this Entity Definition is a subclass Entity Definition with no discriminator, and a base EO has a row already instantiated. A conflict exists because nothing discriminates this Entity from the base Entity.

JBO-25069: Row definition {0} has two sibling subclasses defs, {1} and {2}, but no discriminator to distinguish them.

Cause: Two sibling subclasses of a Row Definition are found, but the Row Definition has no discriminator. This condition is disallowed because when a row is either retrieved or created, the framework cannot determine the correct row class. That is, the hierarchy forks without a discriminator. The only situation whether subclassing is allowed without discriminator is when the tree is straight lined and only one of the classes in the hierarchy line is used to instantiate rows.

JBO-25085: The value being set for attribute {0} does not match the value derived from list binding {1}

Cause: An attribute value being set does not match the attribute value derived from a list binding. This typically happens in the following situations. First, suppose the user sets values for Deptno from 10 to 20 and Dname from ABC to DEF. If a list binding is triggered by Deptno and if it sets Dname to XYZ, the result is an inconsistent state where DEF does not match XYZ. In this situation, this exception is thrown. Second, suppose there is an EmpDept view object with Emp and Dept entity bases. Suppose Dept is reference and read-only and there is a list binding on Dept.Dname whose derived attribute is Emp.Deptno. If the user selects a new Dept through the dept name, a new Dept entity row is brought in (because a new Emp.Deptno is chosen). After this, the framework checks to make sure that the Dname coming from the new entity row matches the original selection from the list binding. If they do not match, this exception is thrown.

Action: Make sure the list binding definition and attribute set values end up in a consistent result (i.e., the derived values from the list binding match the row's attribute values).

JBO-25222: Unable to create application module.

Cause: The application module was typically not created for one of the following reasons: 1. Business components deployed in local mode were not found on the classpath. 2. Unresolved classes existed on the server. 3. Java2 permissions were not granted. 4. Java pool size was too small.

Action: Depending on the cause, chose from the following actions: If business components are deployed in local mode, they might not be on the classpath.
If this is the cause of the error, the exception will usually be followed by a different exception, JBO-25002: NoDefException. If this occurs, try the following: Make a library for the business components. Add the library to the client's project properties. Include the library on the 'libraries' page when creating a deployment profile for the client (whether the client was a web application or a command-line application). Copy the library with the client to the target platform (whether the client was a web application or a command-line application). Include all the copied files (including the library) when setting the classpath on the target platform. There might be unresolved classes on the server. Try the following procedure to resolve any unresolved classes on the database. In the System Navigator, right-click the JDBC connection used to deploy the Business Components project. Choose Invoke SQLPlus from the context menu. Copy and paste the following SQLPlus script into the SQLPlus window. set termout off set echo off set heading off set pages 999 set linesize 2000 set feedback off select 'alter java class "" | replace(dbms_java.longname(object_name),','|'|' resolve;' from user_objects where object_type='JAVA CLASS' and status = 'INVALID' spool C:\temp\resolve.sql / spool off set echo on set termout on @C:\temp\resolve.sql There might be missing Java2 permissions. If this is the cause of the error, there will be permissions errors in the database trace file. To correct the problem, see the help topic 'Granting Permissions on a Business Components EJB' for information on granting Java2 permissions. Note: The location of the database trace file varies from installation to installation, but in a default Windows NT installation, the file will be in the directory ORACLE_HOME\admin\orcl\udump and will have the form orclnnnn.trc. The Java pool size might be too small Business Components for Java deployed as EJBs work best with a Java pool size of at least 50MB. Edit the init.ora file and check the `java_pool_size` parameter. If it is under 50MB, change it, restart the database, and try the connection again.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26020: Attempting to insert row with no matching EO base

Cause: The application code tried to take a row from one row set (or view object) and insert it into another row set (view object). In response, the framework will make a copy of the row in the new row set. This new row will share references to the underlying entity objects. However, if the source and destination row sets do not share any entity object bases at all, this operation will fail as it does not find any entity rows to share.

Action: When attempting to take a row from one row set and insert into another, make sure that they share at least one entity object base.

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26021: NullPointerException while parsing XML file "{0}". Perhaps missing DTD file?

Cause: A NullPointerException was thrown while parsing an XML file. A possible cause for this is that the DTD file is missing (oracle.jbo.dtd.jbo.dtd).

Action: Make sure the appropriate DTD file is present.

JBO-26022: Custom class {0} cannot be found.

Cause: A custom class could not be found and loaded. The custom class might be for a component (for example, view object), a definition (for example, view definition), or a row (for example, view row or entity row).

JBO-26028: View object {0} does not include a primary key attribute {2} of entity base {1}.

Cause: A view definition does not include a primary key attribute of an entity base. When a view object uses an entity as one of its entity bases, it must include all primary key attributes of the underlying entity object.

Action: Change the view definition to include all primary key attributes.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26029: Could not find and load the type map class {0}

Cause: Custom type map class could not be found and loaded.

Action: Make sure that the named class is reachable from the CLASSPATH. If `jbo.TypeMapEntries` property is specified, make sure that the property value is correct. Also, though unlikely, this might be caused by an improper implementation of `SQLBuilder` where it is returning an incorrect value for type map class name. The detail exception (if present) will provide more specific reasons why the attempt to locate and load the custom class failed.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26031: Association end {0} of assoc {1} invalid for entity base {2} in view object {3}.

Cause: Problem in secondary entity base definition in view definition. The named entity base is supposed to use the named entity association end to join it with another entity base, but, when resolved with the association definition, the association end does not resolve to the same entity. For example, suppose one builds a view object with `Dept` and `Emp`. `Emp` is supposed to join with `Dept` using the `EmpEnd` of the `DeptEmp` association. For such a view definition, the framework verifies that `EmpEnd` indeed is from `Emp` entity. If `EmpEnd` was from another entity, say `Person` (or `Dept`), it would not be correct to use that association end to perform join.

Action: Most commonly, this is caused by incorrect information in the view object XML file. Make sure that the association end for the named entity usage is not pointing at the wrong end of association.

JBO-26035: Secondary entity usage {0} is missing parts of association description.

Cause: A view definition is found with an entity usage definition where the secondary entity usage's association description is incomplete.

JBO-26036: The configuration of meta object {0} causes recursive substitution.

Cause: An attempt was made to set up meta object substitution that leads to recursion. For example, consider a substitution where C substitutes B, and B substitutes A, and A substitutes C. This results in a recursive substitution and will cause this error.

Action: Review the meta object substitution and correct errors.

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26037: Cannot find matching EO from discriminator columns for view object {0}, entity base {1}, discr value {2}.

Cause: While creating a new view row, the system found an entity object base with discriminator column attributes. However, the discriminator column values coming from the view row do not match any of the entity objects (the entity for the entity object base or any of its extended entities).

Action: Make sure that the view row discriminator column values match one and only one entity object.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26038: Cannot find an entity usage for entity {1} in view link definition {0}, view link end {2}.

Cause: The view link definition is based on an entity association. One of its ends specifies the named entity definition, but the view definition for that view link end does not have an entity usage for that entity definition.

Action: Correct the error in the view link definition (XML file). In particular, check to see if the view link source and destination are not switched with those of the entity association.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26039: View object {0} does not include an alternate key attribute {2} of entity base {1}, entity key {3}.

Cause: A view definition does not include an alternate key attribute of an entity base. When a view object uses an entity as one of its entity bases, and when it defines a view object level alternate key using one of the entity alternate keys, it must map the entity attributes that make up the alternate key.

Action: Change the view definition to include all necessary alternate key attributes.

This executes a SQL statement like `select a.oid, make_ref(table-name, a.oid) ...`. Somehow, this statement is failing.

Action: Ensure that : The Oracle database version is correct. The table in question is an object table. This error normally carries a detail exception from the database, which will give further information about the database failure. Take a look at the detail exception and address the database problem.
