Release Notes

These release notes contain information about the Sun Java™ Desktop System Configuration Manager, Release 1. The notes contain important information available at the time of Release 1, including information about known issues and workarounds, technical notes, and pointers to additional resources. Be sure you read this document before you begin using the Sun Java Desktop System Configuration Manager (also known in this document as the Configuration Manager).

System Requirements

For information about system requirements, see the Sun Java™ Desktop System Configuration Manager Installation Guide, which can be found at <http://docs.sun.com>.

Installation Notes

If you need to reinstall the Sun Java Desktop System Configuration Manager, you must first uninstall the Configuration Manager that is already on your system.

Known Issues

This list covers some of the known problems with the Sun Java Desktop System Configuration Manager. Read the list before reporting any new bugs.

Problem ID	Description and Workaround.
4982026	Minor accessibility issues. Some screen readers place the hidden Jump Over Tab Navigation Area link at the end of the page instead of at the beginning.
5004807	When installing on Red Hat 7.3, the following error occurs: bash: /root/.bashrc: Permission denied error The error has no negative impact, and can be ignored.

Troubleshooting

If exceptions are displayed in your HTML pages directly after entering the Configuration Manager from the Sun™ Web Console, try the following:

- Clear the cache directory
(`/usr/share/webconsole/work/Standalone/localhost/apoc/jsp/`)
where tomcat stores its compiled JSPs.
- Verify that the file `polycmgr.cfg` exists
(`/usr/share/webconsole/apoc/WEB-INF/`).
- Verify that the file `polycmgr.cfg` has correct user rights (read access for `noaccess:noaccess`).
- Verify that the LDAP data stored in the file `polycmgr.cfg` corresponds to your LDAP server, such as host, port, baseDN, and so on.

Sun Java System Directory Server 5.2 Hotfix 1

This patch should be applied to avail of the fix for bug 4903368. Without this fix, if a user chooses to remove five or more policy groups assigned to an entity, then the Configuration Manager will remove all the assigned policy groups from that entity. More importantly, if a user chooses to remove five or more policy groups assigned to the root entity, then not only will all assigned policy groups be removed from that entity, but the Configuration Manager LDAP metaconfiguration data will also be deleted from the Directory Server. The Directory Server cannot then be used by the Configuration Manager until the `createServiceTree` installation script is run again.

Issues with the Java™ Desktop System Release 2 for the Solaris™ Operating System

Users who want to use the Configuration Manager to manage the Java™ Desktop System Release 2 for the Solaris operating platform will need to use the Configuration Manager Release 1 that was delivered with the Java™ Desktop System Release 2 for Linux. In so doing, users should note that the following managed configuration options of the Configuration Manager are currently not applicable:

- Policies – Gnome 2.2 – Advanced – Panels
- Policies – Gnome 2.2 – Lockdown (except for Terminal Settings)
