1 Overview

Personal Brand

Personal brand is the unique profile you create for yourself and which sets you apart from others in your organization.

Building your personal brand is an ongoing process where you create and manage your skill profile and social reputation in various professional and social networks. Go to Me > Personal Brand to create and manage your personal brand.

Skills

The skills that you want to showcase are those that you're already good at or those you want to develop further. You set milestones to measure your progress as you work at developing a skill. You can endorse others' skills, opt to be a mentor for skills you're good at, and be a mentee for skills you want to develop. Your manager can request an expert to mentor you in a specific skill too. All these things help enhance your profile.

Social Reputation

How others perceive you when you interact in social forums such as surveys, endorsements, and discussions goes in building your social reputation. This also includes what you post in social media. If you opt to have your social media posts analyzed then a check is run to see if your posts comply with your organization's social media policy.

Role Types

Here's how social role types are classified:

- Primary: A role is designated as primary based on its measure relative to the other roles owned by the person. The top three roles owned by a person are designated as primary. Primary social roles account for more than 50 percent of a person's social activities and interactions.
- Secondary: The next two roles that remain after assigning the primary roles are designated as secondary roles.

- Others: These are the roles remaining after assigning the primary and secondary roles.

Social Roles

Here's the list of social roles and their meanings:

- Ambassador: Promotes the team and company brands in a positive light
- Communicator: Actively reaches out to others and openly shares information
- Expert: Possesses unique and deep knowledge in one or multiple fields
- Innovator: Introduces new and unique ideas
- Leader: Motivates and engages others
- Knowledge Broker: Has intrinsic knowledge about sources that can't easily be captured
- Team Player: Works cooperatively with others to achieve team goals

FAQs for Personal Brand

What's a social reputation score?

Six reputation criteria measure the extent to which people use social media, and interact with or influence other users of social media.

For each criterion, percentile values rank each person (those who have opted to have their social media use monitored) in comparison with others. These percentile values are designated as social reputation scores.

What's a meeting survey?

A meeting survey is an automated survey that managers can send to people who attend meetings hosted by their direct reports.

What happens when a survey response is submitted?

The response is analyzed to determine the overall sentiment expressed by the respondent.

The words in the response are used to determine if the overall sentiment is positive, negative, or neutral. For example, "The audio quality was poor" is analyzed as a negative sentiment.

2 Employee Personal Brand

How You Endorse a Skill

Endorsements help recognize a person's skills and talent positively. Use the Endorsements page to see endorsements you receive and to endorse others.

You can endorse your peers for an existing skill or a new skill. In both cases, the endorsed skill is added to the person's skill profile.

As an employee, you can access your endorsements from Me > Personal Brand > Endorsements. As a line manager, you can access your team endorsements from My Team > Personal Brand > Team Skills.

Employee Endorsements

When you endorse a peer, the endorsed skill appears in their list of interpersonal or specialized skills. To endorse people other than peers, you search for the person's name, add the skill, and endorse them.

Manager Endorsements

You endorse direct reports by taking into account their skills, results from meeting surveys, and compliance scores over a period of time.

How You Request Skill Mentoring

You can request mentoring for skills you want to improve further. As a mentee you can search for and send a request to mentors from the Mentorship page in the Personal Brand work area.

You can select either mentoring or mentoring and job shadowing as part of your request.

Mentorship Profile

You can make your mentorship profile relevant and interesting by adding specific details of the areas in which you want to mentor others. You can add information about work experience, educational background, areas of expertise, and areas of learning in your Mentorship Profile on the Preferences page.

Mentor Preferences

As a mentor, you can review mentee profiles and accept or reject mentorship requests from potential mentees. These are the possible actions you can take:

- Accept: You will be listed as a potential mentor in others' profiles.
- Reject: You won't be listed as a potential mentor in others' profiles, and your existing mentees will be removed.

Mentee Actions

Use View Mentoring Plan on your Mentorship page to see the plan, which includes a ready-to-use checklist that you can mark as complete as you make progress during the mentorship.

Active Plan

By default, the status of the mentoring plan is active. After you set a mentoring plan to complete, the status changes to complete. Plans once completed can't be edited any further. If you don't complete a mentoring plan it remains in incomplete status. Such mentoring plans expire automatically after 6 months from the date of creation.

Recommended Checklist

Your mentoring plan includes a recommended checklist, which has some key milestones that you can use to track progress. The items that appear in the checklist are determined by updates that your administrator makes. You can only mark items complete in this recommended checklist.

Goals and Tasks

You can add goals that include tasks specific to the skill being developed. For each task, you can set a target completion date and subsequently mark the status. You can add or remove goals and tasks based on your requirements.

How Team Compliance is Evaluated

As a manager you need to ensure your team members comply with the six policies for the use of social media. Your team's compliance score is evaluated based on posts in various social media.

How Compliance is Evaluated

If team members have opted to have their social media posts monitored, here's what happens. A search is run to look for text strings that contain terms which aren't supposed to be used as per the social media use policy. It designates each match an issue.

What the Compliance Policy Evaluates

Your team members need to comply with these six policies for the use of social media:

- No Profanity: Not post any content that uses profanity, on a blog or social media site.
- Respect Confidentiality: Not disclose the company's confidential information, including financial and other corporate information that's not public.
- Respect References: Recognize and respect others' intellectual property rights, including copyrights. Limited use of third-party materials.
- Non-disparagement: Not post anything false, misleading, or embarrassing to another person or entity. Respect others' privacy.
- Future Offerings: Not discuss product upgrades or future product releases.
- Use Disclaimer: Make clear that opinions are their own and don't necessarily reflect the views of the company.

Team Compliance Scores

When you drill down to each employee's profile this is what you see:

- Total number of posts and the number with issues (posts that violate a policy).
- Any significant changes in the issues, for example, if the issues are rapidly falling or slowly improving.
- Compliance data over different time periods such as last 7 days, month, quarter, or 180 days.

How You Manage Connectors

You can set up connectors to social networking websites using the Skill Settings content area in the Personal Brand Administration work area.

Running a Connector

You must schedule and run the HCM connector first before setting up a connector to any social networking website. Running the connector populates default data for all internal users (employees) and creates their profiles. The reputation, compliance, and social role scores appear empty until employees opt in by registering their social networking accounts.

Perform the following steps to schedule the connector:

1. In the Personal Brand Administration work area, Skill Settings content area, click Open Data Integration Tool.
2. In the list of data connectors, click the Actions icon (...) against the connector you want, and then click Schedule.
3. Select the frequency you want the connector to run (weekly, daily, hourly), and then click Save.

After running the connector for the first time, you can schedule and run it periodically (to refresh data) along with other connectors.

Setting Up a Connector

Perform the following steps to set up a connector to a social networking website:

1. Create an application on the social networking website. You may have to create a developer account first. From the application, you can get the key values required for setting up the connector such as API key, Secret Key.
2. In the Personal Brand Administration work area, Skill Settings content area, Social Networks section, enter the key values.
3. Click Schedule Connectors. Specify a date and time for the connector's first run.

Testing a Connector

Perform the following steps to test a connector after setting it up:

1. Click Test Connectors. The application tests each connector and displays the results in the Test Connectors Status window. The test results indicate whether the connector test passed or failed, or the test isn't supported because the user isn't registered on the specific social-networking website.

Scheduling a Connector

You must schedule connectors to run periodically to refresh existing data and populate data for newly registered users. Perform the following steps to schedule a connector.

1. Click Schedule Connectors.
2. Select the connector you want to schedule, for example, Facebook.
3. Select the frequency you want the connector to run (hourly, daily, weekly).
4. Specify the appropriate interval. For example, you can select hourly, then specify 8. The connector runs every eight hours.

Note: You must select all the skill sources and run the connector every day.

Running Connectors Manually

You can override a scheduled run at any time by running connectors manually. To run connectors immediately, click Run Connectors. This runs all scheduled connectors immediately unless another run is in progress. If another run is in progress, the connectors run after the current run completes.

Canceling Connector Jobs

You can cancel connector jobs scheduled for social network data analysis, survey response analysis, and contact information geocoding. You can select all the jobs at a time or select only a specific connector job to cancel. Click Cancel Connector Jobs and select the connector job that needs to be canceled.

Selecting Skill Sources

You can select skill sources to obtain skill data for users in the organization. Click Select Skill Sources and select the source that needs to be used during the connector run. Based on the data collected for a skill source, skill recommendations are displayed in the users' skill profile.

For more information, see the document Integrating Social Network Applications with Oracle Workforce Reputation Management (2422733.1) on My Oracle Support (<https://support.oracle.com>)

Schedule a Skill Connector

You must schedule connectors to run periodically to refresh and populate data. Perform these steps to schedule a connector.

1. In the Personal Brand Administration work area, Skill Settings content area, click Open Data Integration Tool.
2. In the list of data connectors, click the Actions icon (...) against the connector you want, and then click Schedule.
3. Select the frequency you want the connector to run (weekly, daily, hourly), and then click Save.

Note: You must select all the skill sources and run the connector every day. Based on the data collected for a skill source, skill recommendations display in the user's skill profile.

Third Party Data Integration

Use the Configure Third Party Integration section in the Personal Brand Administration work area to integrate with third-party applications. The section enables you to create connectors that automatically get data from different sources such as Twitter, Facebook.

The data is then used to assess the personal brand of an employee if they have opted-in and authorized to have their social network posts read.

Third party data integration provides a simple guided flow that makes it easy to configure connectors.

Whether you use a predefined connector or configure one manually, third party data integration can connect to a source if it's RESTful compliant. This means you just need an OPEN API file from the source and can import that using third party data integration. Once you import the file, you need to map the data and flows from the source to the target application as per your requirements. Then, you can use the visual flow designer to review the mapping and refine it further. After creating a connector, you need to schedule it's run.

Configure a Connector Using Third Party Data Integration

Before you configure the connector, you must first create an application on the social networking website. Create a developer account and get the key values required for setting up the connector such as API key, Secret Key.

1. Navigate to My Client Groups > Personal Brand Administration work area, click Skill Settings.
2. Click Open Data Integration Tool.
3. In the Data Connectors page, click Add to configure a connector manually or automatically.
4. If don't want to configure automatically, specify the connector name and select Configure manually, then click Save. If you want to use the connector as a default discussion board, select Set as default discussion board.
5. Provide the Open API file details for the social network application. Upload the file in the Import Open API Specification section and click Continue.
6. Select the API operations to get resources from or post information to the social network application.

7. Map the data flow between the social network application and HCM in the Create Data Flow section. Review the data flows and mapping once again, if required.
8. Enter the authentication details such as the API key and Secret key.
9. Enter the scope URLs to configure the list of authorization permissions for the social network application. This grants you authorization access to the resources of the application.
10. After you finish, save the configuration, specify the frequency, and schedule the connector run.

FAQs for Personal Brand Administration

What happens if I set the compliance threshold?

The application displays a warning message to the manager when an employee violates a compliance policy more often than the number specified in the compliance threshold.

For example, if you set the compliance threshold to 5 and an employee has violated a compliance policy 6 times then a message is displayed to the manager on the Team Compliance page. The message indicates that the employee has exceeded the corporate benchmarks and includes a link to the compliance policies that the employee has violated.

What happens when I enable or disable items in the Recommended Checklist?

As an administrator, you can enable or disable items in the Recommended Checklist section on the Mentor Settings tab in Personal Brand Administration.

- When you enable an item, it's added to the Recommended Checklist section in all active mentor plans.
- When you disable a checklist item, the item is removed from existing mentor plans only if the item isn't marked as complete. If the item has already been marked as complete before you disable it, it remains as-is in the mentor plan.

You can also create an item and add it to the Recommended Checklist.

How can I associate an eligibility profile to a specific group of organizational survey recipients?

In the Create Participant Eligibility Profile page, create an eligibility profile based on criteria such as person type, business unit, or legal employer. Ensure that you create the eligibility profile with Personal Brand as the value for Profile Usage.

The eligibility profile you create is visible to line managers in the Existing Eligibility Profiles drop-down list. The survey is sent only to those employees who meet the criteria specified in the eligibility profile.

Are there any additional privileges that I need to assign to line managers for organizational surveys?

Yes, there are. These are the 3 privileges you need to assign to the line manager role:

- Evaluate Eligibility (BEN_EVALUATE_ELIGIBILITY_PRIV)
- Use REST Service - Benefits Lists of Values (BEN_REST_SERVICE_ACCESS_BENEFITS_LOVS_PRIV)
- Use REST Service - Eligibility Objects (BEN_REST_SERVICE_ACCESS_ELIGIBILITY_OBJECTS_PRIV)

How can I verify if the connector job run is complete for organizational surveys?

To see the status you need to go to Tools > Scheduled Processes and search for the Run Connector job set.

When an organizational survey is sent to recipients of an eligibility profile it may take time for the connector job run to complete. You can see if the job run has completed and if required modify the job notification settings there.

What's a connector?

A connector is a flow-based process between HCM and a third-party application such as Twitter, Slack. It controls the order of tasks needed to extract data from a source, for example, Twitter and helps map the data to HCM.

You can create, edit, and execute connectors from the Social Network Connectors page.

What happens to my existing social connectors?

Nothing happens to existing connectors. But, if you create a new connector using Data Integration, it's better to keep only one of the connectors enabled for a social network application.

Why can't I see Data Integration in the Personal Brand Administration page?

You may not have the required access. You need to have the Manage Workforce Reputation Data Integration (HWR_MANAGE_REPUTATION_DATA_INTEGRATION_PRIV) privilege to access Data Integration.
