BEA-320950: Failed to start the SNMP agent. If it failed to bind to the port, check if the port is available or the process has permission to bind to the port.
Cause: Binding to specified UDP and agentX ports is a common problem. The ports to which the agent binds may not be available. Also, on UNIX platforms, ports up to 1023 are protected and can be bound only by processes owned by root.
Action: Check whether the specified ports are available. On UNIX, the default UDP port (161) and master AgentX port (705) are protected to be used by processes owned by root. In that case, either start the server as root, or configure the SNMP agent to use port numbers higher than 1023.

BPM-36335: Fact not found in the rule engine working memory, rule session execution failed.
Cause: The rule session [0] failed because an instance of the fact [1] could not be found in the working memory of the rule session.
Action: This is most likely a rule modeling error. The decision service interaction expects the fact instance to exist in the working memory of the rule session. Check the rule actions in rule designer and make sure that a fact of the expected type is being asserted. If the error persists, contact Oracle Support Services.

Cause: The rule session [0] failed because more than one fact instance of the fact [1] exists in the rule session working memory. The decision service cannot identify which one to take.
Action: This is most likely due to a rule modeling issue. Make sure that the fact of the given type is asserted only once. One common issue is that the rule conditions are not mutually exclusive and as a result of that more than one rule action is executed. In case the rule action has a assert new statement of the given fact type then multiple fact instances are created in the rule session working memory and the decision service is not able to identify the one that should be returned as the result of the decision service interaction. DMS-57003: Failed to process the wrapped DMS execution context [0] sent by [1] (user-agent: [2]) when requesting the resource [3].
  Cause: By scrutinizing the incoming HTTP request DMS has attempted to detect and, if appropriate, make use of a wrapped execution context. That process has failed. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request, but the ability to correlate the processing of this request with others to which it may related will have been adversely affected. A DMS execution context is an object that contains context information about the piece of work being performed at a particular moment in time. The type of context information carried by the DMS execution context may include the URL of the http request, the unique correlation key (ECID) assigned to that piece of work, etc - information that is useful for tracking requests though the system. The execution context does not carry user names, passwords or general application parameters. The DMS execution context should not be confused with application specific context objects, such as ADF-context or Faces-context, which are vital to the accurate execution of the application concerned.

Action: Contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57004: Failed to initialize the DMS trace to be associated with DMS execution context {0}, that itself is associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the initialization of the trace system for this request. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request but will be a problem if the trace (aggregate, debug or triggered) data was of value to the system's administrator.

Action: If the trace of this request was important, and has been affected by this error, then contact Oracle Support Services

DMS-57005: Failed to terminate the DMS trace associated with DMS execution context {0}, that itself is associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the finalization of the trace system for this request. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request but will be a problem if the trace (aggregate, debug or triggered) data was of value to the system's administrator.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57006: Failed to deactivate the DMS execution context, {0}, associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the termination of the DMS execution context in place during the processing of the HTTP request. This should not affect the servlet handling the request, but may result in an invalid execution context being in place for the processing of future requests and possibly prevent accurate trace data from being gathered.

Action: Contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57007: Failed to url-decode a wrapped execution context (\{0\}) due to a problem in the decoding process itself: (1)

Cause: A problem has occurred while trying to url-decode a wrapped execution context found as a url-parameter. The consequence is that the execution context being passed from client to server can not be used. A failure in the DMS execution context feature does not generally result in a complete failure of the system or application making use of it, but it can result in misleading trace output or misleading correlation keys (ECID) in log messages: generally only the administrator will be aware of such changes in the behavior of an affected application.

Action: Determine if there is any code in the system that integrates with the Oracle DMS Context API (java package oracle.dms.context) but was not produced by Oracle. If there is no such code then contact Oracle Support Services. Otherwise scrutinize and test the non-Oracle code, and if necessary contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1

Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57008: The execution context put in place at the start of the request, \{0\}, is not the execution context in place at the end of the request, \{1\}. The request is as follows: (2)

Cause: When enabled to do so DMS associates an execution context with the resources (typically a thread) assigned to process an incoming request. In this case the context that DMS assigned at the start of the processing is not the one in place at the end of the processing. At some point during the processing the context has been changed. This could result in the loss of the ability to correlate the work performed across the complete request lifecycle for this request. A failure in the DMS execution context feature does not generally result in a complete failure of the system or application making use of it, but it can result in misleading trace output or misleading correlation keys (ECID) in log messages: generally only the administrator will be aware of such changes in the behavior of an affected application.

Action: Determine if there is any code in the system that integrates with the Oracle DMS Context API (java package oracle.dms.context) but was not produced by Oracle. DMS-57009: An error prevented selection of an appropriate execution context implementation for this environment - the feature will be disabled.

DMS-58005: ignoring exception: {0}

DMS-58006: Problem encountered while removing old files from trace output directories.
  Cause: DMS was attempting to remove old files from the trace output directories but for some reason (see base exception) has failed.
  Action: The system is unlikely to fail as a consequence of this error, but disk space will be used that would otherwise have been released. Refer to the base exception to see if the problem can be addressed, and consider deleting unrequired files manually (DMS no longer needs these old files so any or all of them can be removed).
  Level: 1
  Type: WARNING

Impact: Files

DMS-58007: Problem encountered when closing file and associated streams.
  Cause: As part of the termination of a normal read or write operation on a file the file could not be closed.
  Action: If a file can not be properly closed then the operating system's file-handle associated with that file may not be properly released. An operating system can manage only a finite number of file-handles and if they are not released then new file-handles can not be created. One consequence of a depletion of file-handles is that file input/output on the machine concerned may be forced to come to a stop. It is more likely, however, that this is a one-off problem and that Java will tidy up the file-handle internally. This type of problem suggests a problem with either the JVM, the operating system or the state of the machine on which they are running. Review the base exception to see if the issue can be resolved (e.g. memory issues, disk space issues, file access issues, etc.). In order to understand the scale of the problem continue to monitor the system for similar or related issues. If necessary stop and start the product to fully reinitialize the JVM on which it runs.

DMS-58008: error writing trace data to disk

Review the base exception to see if the issue can be resolved (e.g. memory issues, disk space issues, file access issues, etc.). In order to understand the scale of the DMS-58013: Problem encountered aggregating trace: {0}.

Cause: DMS has failed to perform the aggregation process on the trace data collected during the handling of this particular task or servlet request. A DMS trace is composed of a series of DMS trace events that represent an operation performed within DMS. Examples of trace events are: a sensor update, the start and end of an HTTP request. An aggregate trace is the result of aggregating trace data for tasks (typically HTTP requests) associated with the same URI. Failure to perform the aggregation processing for this task will mean that the summary data for the URI concerned will not be accurate.

Action: Review exception details and the log for any seemingly related messages. If the problem has come from the JVM itself: This type of problem suggests a problem with either the JVM, the operating system or the state of the machine on which they are running. Review the base exception to see if the issue can be resolved (e.g. memory issues, disk space issues, file access issues, etc.). In order to understand the scale of the problem continue to monitor the system for similar or related issues. If necessary stop and start the product to fully reinitialize the JVM on which it runs. Otherwise the problem is with the code written to run on the JVM: Determine if there is any code in the system that integrates with the Oracle DMS Trace API (java package oracle.dms.trace) but was not produced by Oracle. If there is no such code then contact Oracle Support Services. Otherwise scrutinize and test the non-Oracle code in order to isolate the problem.

DMS-58014: Failed to handle REQUEST_BEGIN for {0}. The trace will not be aggregated.

Cause: DMS did not find the trace event that marks the start of the series of trace events to be associated with an HTTP request. Without that particular trace event DMS can not be sure that the set of collected trace events will accurately represent the actions performed during that HTTP request and consequently will not process them further. Failure to perform the aggregation processing for this task will mean that the summary data for the URI concerned will not be accurate.

Level: 1

Type: WARNING

Impact: Configuration

DMS-58032: Can not remove a filter using a null or empty filter ID.

Cause:
Action:

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Configuration

DMS-58033: Can not associate a destination, id={0}, with a filter, id={1} if the filter declares that it will not pass any events.

Cause: An instance of a filter should declare the set of event types in which it has an interest. In this particular case the set is empty and thus the filter is apparently interested in no events at all. Such a filter serves no sensible purpose and therefore will be ignored.

Action: Check the log file for other error relating to this filter to see if there were problems in its construction. Also verify the configuration of the filter and its associated destination (some filters are created implicitly to cooperate with a destination, so the configuration may only specify details of the destination).

DMS-58040: The JRockit FlightRecorder class is declaring that it is not the JRockit native implementation and thus DMS can not use it.

Cause: DMS only makes use of the JRockit FlightRecorder implementation that is native to JRockit. The FlightRecorder class available to DMS is apparently not a native implementation and will therefore not be used by DMS.

Action: This situation will not affect the runtime operation of the system, but in order to avoid the message being reported again either switch to using the JRockit JVM or remove eventRoutes from dms_config.xml that involve the JFRDestination.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-58041: The JRockit FlightRecorder class is declaring that it is not active and so DMS can not use it.

Cause: DMS can only make use of the JRockit FlightRecorder class if it is active. The FlightRecorder class is declaring that it is not active and therefore DMS will not make use of it.

Action: This situation will not affect the runtime operation of the system, but in order to avoid the message being reported again either switch to using the JRockit JVM or remove eventRoutes from dms_config.xml that involve the JFRDestination.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Session

FRM-93240: Multiple Forms applications cannot share an HTTP session.

Cause: A Forms application was launched in such a way that it attempted to share an HTTP session with an already running Forms application. This might result from one of the following: 1. The user selected File, then New, then Browser Window (or Ctrl+N) in Internet Explorer while the servlet session was being tracked using cookies (that is, session cookies were enabled). In this case Forms does not support creating a new session for the second window. 2. An application attempted to launch multiple Forms applications, and cookies were enabled in the Forms application. 3. An application attempted to launch multiple Forms applications using POST, cookies were disabled in the Forms application, and the launching application specified the same cookie name as did the Forms application.

FRM-93423: adding {0} runtime processes to the runtime process pool for configuration section [{1}] because the pool has gone below the minimum

Cause: A prestarted runtime process was removed from the runtime process pool for the indicated configuration section, in order to start a new Forms application. This caused the number of prestarted runtime processes to fall below the value specified by the prestartMin parameter.
