DMS-57001: Failed to update WorkContextMap.
    Cause:
    Action:

DMS-57002: Exception raised while attempting to reset WorkContextMap in order to resolve a previous exception raised when updating WorkContextMap.
    Cause:
    Action:

DMS-57003: Failed to process the serialized DMS execution context {0} sent by {1} (user-agent: {2}) when requesting the resource {3}.
    Cause: By scrutinizing the incoming HTTP request DMS has attempted to detect and, if appropriate, make use of a wrapped execution context. That process has failed. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request, but the ability to correlate the processing of this request with others to which it may related will have been adversely affected. A DMS execution context is an object that contains context information about the piece of work being performed at a particular moment in time. The type of context information carried by the DMS execution context may include the URL of the http request, the unique correlation key (ECID) assigned to that piece of work, etc - information that is useful for tracking requests through the system. The execution context does not carry user names, passwords or general application parameters. The DMS execution context should not be confused with application specific context objects, such as ADF-context or Faces-context, which are vital to the accurate execution of the application concerned.

Action: Contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING

DMS-57004: Failed to initialize the DMS trace to be associated with DMS execution context {0}, that itself is associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the initialization of the trace system for this request. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request but will be a problem if the trace (aggregate, debug or triggered) data was of value to the system’s administrator.

Action: If the trace of this request was important, and has been affected by this error, then contact Oracle Support Services

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57005: Failed to terminate the DMS trace associated with DMS execution context {0}, that itself is associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the finalization of the trace system for this request. This should not affect the processing of the servlet handling the request
but will be a problem if the trace (aggregate, debug or triggered) data was of value to the system’s administrator.

Action: If the trace of this request was important, and has been affected by this error, then contact Oracle Support Services

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57006: Failed to deactivate the DMS execution context, {0}, associated with a request of resource {1}.

Cause: A problem has occurred in the termination of the DMS execution context in place during the processing of the HTTP request. This should not affect the servlet handling the request, but may result in an invalid execution context being in place for the processing of future requests and possibly prevent accurate trace data from being gathered.

Action: Contact Oracle Support Services.
Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57007: Failed to url-decode a serialized execution context ((0)) due to a problem in the decoding process itself: (1)
Cause: A problem has occurred while trying to url-decode a wrapped execution context found as a url-parameter. The consequence is that the execution context being passed from client to server cannot be used. A failure in the DMS execution context feature does not generally result in a complete failure of the system or application making use of it, but it can result in misleading trace output or misleading correlation keys (ECID) in log messages; generally only the administrator will be aware of such changes in the behavior of an affected application.
Action: Determine if there is any code in the system that integrates with the Oracle DMS Context API (java package oracle.dms.context) but was not produced by Oracle. If there is no such code then contact Oracle Support Services. Otherwise scrutinize and test the non-Oracle code, and if necessary contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1
Type: WARNING
Impact: Other

DMS-57008: The execution context put in place at the start of the request, (0), is not the execution context in place at the end of the request, (1). The request is as follows: (2)
Cause: When enabled to do so DMS associates an execution context with the resources (typically a thread) assigned to process an incoming request. In this case the context that DMS assigned at the start of the processing is not the one in place at the end of the processing. At some point during the processing the context has been changed. This could result in the loss of the ability to correlate the work performed across the complete request lifecycle for this request. A failure in the DMS execution context feature does not generally result in a complete failure of the system or application making use of it, but it can result in misleading trace output or misleading correlation keys (ECID) in log messages; generally only the administrator will be aware of such changes in the behavior of an affected application.
Action: Determine if there is any code in the system that integrates with the Oracle DMS Context API (java package oracle.dms.context) but was not produced by Oracle. If there is no such code then contact Oracle Support Services. Otherwise scrutinize and test the non-Oracle code, and if necessary contact Oracle Support Services.

DMS-57009: An error prevented selection of an appropriate execution context implementation for this environment - the feature will be disabled.

DMS-58007: Problem encountered when closing file and associated streams.

Cause: As part of the termination of a normal read or write operation on a file the file could not be closed.

Action: If a file can not be properly closed then the operating system’s file-handle associated with that file may not be properly released. An operating system can manage only a finite number of file-handles and if they are not released then new file-handles can not be created. One consequence of a depletion of file-handles is that file input/output on the machine concerned may be forced to come to a stop. It is more likely, however, that this is a one-off problem and that Java will tidy up the file-handle internally. This type of problem suggests a problem with either the JVM, the operating system or the state of the machine on which they are running. Review the base exception to see if the issue can be resolved (e.g. memory issues, disk space issues, file access issues, etc.). In order to understand the scale of the problem continue to monitor the system for similar or related issues. If necessary stop and start the product to fully reinitialize the JVM on which it runs.

DMS-58013: Problem encountered aggregating trace: {0}.

Cause: DMS has failed to perform the aggregation process on the trace data collected during the handling of this particular task or servlet request. A DMS trace is composed of a series of DMS trace events that represent an operation performed within DMS. Examples of trace events are: a sensor update, the start and end of an HTTP request. An aggregate trace is the result of aggregating trace data for tasks (typically HTTP requests) associated with the same URI. Failure to perform the aggregation processing for this task will mean that the summary data for the URI concerned will not be accurate.

Action: Review exception details and the log for any seemingly related messages. If the problem has come from the JVM itself: This type of problem suggests a problem with either the JVM, the operating system or the state of the machine on which they are running. DMS-58014: Failed to handle REQUEST_BEGIN for {0}. The trace will not be aggregated.
Cause: DMS did not find the trace event that marks the start of the series of trace events to be associated with an HTTP request. Without that particular trace event DMS can not be sure that the set of collected trace events will accurately represent the actions performed during that HTTP request and consequently will not process them further. Failure to perform the aggregation processing for this task will mean that the summary data for the URI concerned will not be accurate.

A DMS trace is composed of a series of DMS trace events that represent an operation performed within DMS. Examples of trace events are: a sensor update, the start and end of an HTTP request. JBO-25013: Too many objects match the primary key [0].

Cause: An attempt was made to add a newly fetched or created entity to the cache, but the new entity has the same primary key as an existing entity. The primary key must be unique for this entity type.

Action: Add more attributes to the key definition for the entity type, so that each row for this entity is uniquely identifiable. Or fix the primary key value so that this entity has a unique key identifier.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25014: Another user has changed the row with primary key [0].

Cause: The database value does not match the cached value for this entity object. This could happen when another user or operation has committed modifications to the same entity row in the database. This exception can also be thrown if the 'equals' method on one of the domain type attributes in the entity fails.

Action: Choose from the following options: 1. Verify that another user or operation has not modified the same row in the database. If this entity has attributes of a domain type verify that the `<code>equals()</code>` method on these domains do not fail when comparing the existing cached value with the newly fetched value. 2. For any attributes/columns that are updated by the database, modify the entity attribute definition by selecting 'Refresh after update' on the Attribute Settings page of the Entity Object Wizard. 3. Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25028: Domain object type {0} cannot be created: {1}.

Cause: A domain object could not be created with the given value. Either a domain constructor that accepts the given value does not exist, or there is no conversion method in the domain object for the given value type, or the domain constructor threw an unexpected exception.

Impact: Programmatic
JBO-25030: Detail entity {0} with row key {1} cannot find or invalidate its owning entity.

Cause: No container entity was found for a detail entity in a composition association. This could occur if a nonexistent master key value was passed in during creation of a new detail entity instance, or if the foreign key value of this entity was modified so that it no longer matched any master entity.

Action: Pass a valid foreign key value to the 'create' method or 'setAttribute' method so that an appropriate master row is found for this entity.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

Cause: The client attempted to access an attribute of a view which is mapped to an entity row, but the corresponding entity row is null. If the view object consists of multiple entity object bases and if the secondary entity object bases are reference-only, the entity rows could be null if the foreign key linking the primary entity to the secondary entity object is null.

Action: Do not try to access attributes of missing entity rows in this situation.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25032: Passivation to target store {1} is unsuccessful.

Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25034: Row with handle {1} is not found in rowset {0}.

Cause: The client attempted to locate a row with a stale row handle. This error might be raised if the client tries to take a row out of one query collection and use its handle to find a row in another query collection. Note that if the client calls executeQuery on a rowset, it might receive a new query collection. Thus, this error might occur if the client retrieves a row from a rowset, takes its row handle, calls executeQuery, and then tries to locate the row using the saved handle. This exception might also be raised if a row reference is used across transaction boundaries and the row handle has become stale and hence the corresponding row cannot be found.

Action: Make sure that the row handle is not stale. One approach is to find the row again using its primary key before attempting to act on the row.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25035: The application module passivation store is invalid.
Cause: An application attempted to change an application module's passivation store after it had been initialized. The passivation store (Database, File or Memory) can only be initialized once. If the customer application logic has not specified a passivation store when the serialization framework is invoked, the passivation store is initialized by the framework.

Action: Check the client application logic for invocations of ApplicationModuleImpl.setStoreForPassiveState which are invoked after the application module passivation store has been initialized.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25036: An invalid object operation was invoked on type {0} with name {1}

Action: Remove the invalid operation invocation or provide exception handling logic.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25037: Detail row set {0} is missing a master row set iterator for view link {1}, master view object {2}.
Cause: This row set is a detail in a master-detail relationship, but it is missing a master row set iterator. Most likely, this occurred because a master row set iterator was removed through a call to removeMasterRowSetIterator() and has not been replaced with an appropriate one.

Action: Call setMasterRowSetIterator() to provide a valid master row set iterator.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25038: Value {2} passed as parameter {1} to method {0} is invalid.
Cause: An attempt was made to invoke a business components method with an invalid parameter value.

Action: Refer to the documentation of error message JBO-25006 (EXC_INVALID_PARAMETER) for more information. The difference between this error message and EXC_INVALID_PARAMETER is that this version does not include an explanation. In general, Oracle recommends using JBO-25006 instead of JBO-25038.

Level: 1

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25041: Type map cannot convert data from \(1\) to \(0\) with operation \(2\).
Cause: The TypeFactory class asked the TypeMapEntries class to convert data, but the TypeMapEntries class did not know how to perform the conversion. This is typically an issue with the TypeMapEntries implementation.
Action: Contact Oracle Support Services.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25042: Row of trans post listener handle \(0\) not found in list.
Cause: Entity row of the given handle is not found in transaction post listener list. Most likely cause of this error is as follows: the user requests certain operation. The operation tries to get access to the row in database. This fails for whatever reason (this exception’s detail might have further information). The system tries to fix the problem at the entity level. It looks for the entity row in the transaction post listener list. The specified row is not found.
Action: Look at the details and see if the cause can be determined from them. Check to see if concurrent updates to database could have caused the problem.

JBO-25045: Row set iterator [0] has detected an implicit synchronization attempt.

Cause: An attempt was made to implicitly synchronize an iterator in a 3-tier running environment. When the application module synchronization mode is set to SYNC_BATCH, iterator synchronization must be done explicitly.

Action: Remove code that attempts to synchronize the iterator implicitly.

JBO-25051: Row of range index {1} is not found in RowSetIterator {0}.

Cause: The client has attempted to locate a row with a range index, but the Row Set Iterator's range does not have a row at the index. It might be that the range index is too big (>= the range size), or that the range is at the bottom and the range index is beyond the last row of the Row Set. Or, the Row Set might have been reset because of operations like rollback and clear-cache. Hence, the range is empty and no row is found.

Action: Make sure that the row set iterator is open and has rows in its range. Also, make sure that the range index falls between the first and the last row of the range.

Cause: This View Object is not Entity based, and its ManageRowsByKey flag is true. Yet, its key definition is empty. Restated, the user has asked for the View rows to be managed by keys, but the key definition is empty (which would produce empty keys for all rows).

Action: In order to manage EO-less View Object by key, a meaningful (non-empty) key definition must be supplied.

Action: The View Object is probably based on an Entity, which in turn is based on a RowSet (EntityDefOverRowSet). It is illegal to use QUERY_MODE_SCAN_ JBO-25068: Entity {0} has a base EO {1} with no discriminator, but base EO has rows in its cache. Cannot populate both caches.

Cause: An attempt was made to create a new instance of an Entity Row. However, this Entity Definition is a subclass Entity Definition with no discriminator, and a base EO has a row already instantiated. A conflict exists because nothing discriminates this Entity from the base Entity.
Action: Typically in this situation, the base class should not instantiate any row. Use the subclass Entity to create the row

Level: 1

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-25069: Row definition {0} has two sibling subclasses def, {1} and {2}, but no discriminator to distinguish them.
Cause: Two sibling subclasses of a Row Definition are found, but the Row Definition has no discriminator. This condition is disallowed because when a row is either retrieved or created, the framework cannot determine the correct row class. That is, the hierarchy forks without a discriminator. The only situation whether subclassing is allowed without discriminator is when the tree is straight lined and only one of the classes in the hierarchy line is used to instantiate rows.
Action: Either define discriminator attributes, or do not create siblings in the row class hierarchy.

JBO-25085: The value being set for attribute {0} does not match the value derived from list binding {1}

Cause: An attribute value being set does not match the attribute value derived from a list binding. This typically happens in the following situations. First, suppose the user sets values for Deptno from 10 to 20 and Dname from ABC to DEF. If a list binding is triggered by Deptno and if it sets Dname to XYZ, the result is an inconsistent state where DEF does not match XYZ. In this situation, this exception is thrown. Second, suppose there is an EmpDept view object with Emp and Dept entity bases. Suppose Dept is reference and read-only and there is a list binding on Dept.Dname whose derived attribute is Emp.Deptno. If the user selects a new Dept through the dept name, a new Dept entity row is brought in (because a new Emp.Deptno is chosen). After this, the framework checks to make sure that the Dname coming from the new entity row matches the original selection from the list binding. If they do not match, this exception is thrown.

Action: Make sure the list binding definition and attribute set values end up in a consistent result (i.e., the derived values from the list binding match the row’s attribute values).

Action: Depending on the cause, chose from the following actions: If business components are deployed in local mode, they might not be on the classpath.
If this is the cause of the error, the exception will usually be followed by a different exception, JBO-25002: NoDefException. If this occurs, try the following: Make a library for the business components. Add the library to the client's project properties. Include the library on the 'libraries' page when creating a deployment profile for the client (whether the client was a web application or a command-line application). Copy the library with the client to the target platform (whether the client was a web application or a command-line application). Include all the copied files (including the library) when setting the classpath on the target platform. There might be unresolved classes on the server. Try the following procedure to resolve any unresolved classes on the database. In the System Navigator, right-click the JDBC connection used to deploy the Business
Components project. Choose Invoke SQLPlus from the context menu. Copy and paste the following SQLPlus script into the SQLPlus window. Set termout off set echo off set heading off set pages 999 set linesize 2000 set feedback off select 'alter java class "'|| replace(dbms_java.longname(object_name),'/','.').' resolve;' from user_objects where object_type='JAVA CLASS' and status = 'INVALID' spool C:\temp\resolve.sql / spool off set echo on set termout on @C:\temp\resolve.sql There might be missing Java2 permissions. If this is the cause of the error, there will be permissions errors in the database trace file. To correct the problem, see the help topic 'Granting Permissions on a Business Components EJB' for information on granting Java2 permissions. Note: The location of the database trace file varies from installation to installation, but in a default Windows NT installation, the file will be in the directory ORACLE_HOME\admin\orcl\udump and will have the form orclnnnn.trc. The Java pool size might be too small Business Components for Java deployed as EJBs work best with a Java pool size of at least 50MB. Edit the init.ora file and check the <code>java_pool_size</code> parameter. If it is under 50MB, change it, restart the database, and try the connection again.

Action: The disconnect and retain application module state target requires that no database state exist before the transaction connection is closed. Examples of database state include open database cursors in non-forward only view objects, database locks, and uncommitted database changes. The client should clean up this state by fetching or resetting any open view objects and committing any uncommitted changes.

JBO-26001: XML File not found for the Container {0}
Cause: Could not open the named XML file for reading.
Action: Try the following: Make sure that the file is present. In particular, if the file is to be found in a Zip/JAR file, make sure that the Zip/JAR file is included in the CLASSPATH. This error is also reported if the name of the XML file does not match the object Name specified in the XML file. If the file system supports case insensitive file names (e.g., Windows NT), make sure that the file name matches the object Name in the XML file in case-sensitive fashion. For a JPX file, this error is reported if the JPX file is missing the JboProject XML tag. Check the JPX file to make sure that the valid tag is in there. One XML file might be extending another XML file (specified by the Extends element in this XML file). This error is reported if the base XML file is not found. When loading the XML file for a package (JboPackage tag), this error is reported if some unexpected error occurs while loading a contained object. In all of the above cases, a more descriptive message might be printed on Diagnostic. To see these messages, run the application with Diagnostic turned on, as in 'java -Djbo.debugoutput=console ...', to see Diagnostic messages.

JBO-26004: A recursive base definition is found while attempting to set the base definition of {0} to {1}.

Cause: An attempt was made to set the base definition of another definition object, e.g., setting B's base definition to A (i.e., B Extends A). However, A already extends B. Setting a recursive (circular) subclassing relationship among definition objects is illegal.

Action: Review the subclassing hierarchy of the definition objects and correct errors.

Cause: The maximum fetch size specified in the view definition XML file is not valid.

Action: Check the content of the XML file for the view definition. Look for an XML element named 'MaxFetchSize'. Make sure that the value for the element is a non-negative integer, or 'MAX_FETCH_UNLIMITED', or 'MAX_FETCH_DEFAULT'. A MaxFetchSize of 0 is the same as MAX_FETCH_UNLIMITED.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26008: Could not resolve reference to "[0]".

Cause: A problem is found in resolving a view link definition or an association. In case of a view link, this error might be caused by the fact that the source or destination view object cannot found. Or, if the view link ends have attribute names, this error might indicate that the named attributes cannot be found. Similarly, for an association, this error indicates that either source or destination entity object or attributes involved in the association cannot be found.

Action: Make sure the XML definition for the view link/association has correct view object/entity object/attribute names.

Level: 1

JBO-26009: Serialized file "[0]" is invalid. The root object is not a Business Component object.

Cause: This error occurs if the application uses meta object serialization files (.ser files) instead of XML files. It indicates that after the .ser file was deserialized, the top level object returned from deserialization was not an instance of oracle.jbo.server.xml.JboElementImpl.

Action: Repair the corrupt .ser file.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

JBO-26010: Invalid Entity Attribute Name "[1]" specified for the View Attribute "[0]"

Cause: Entity attribute name in the view definition XML file is invalid or is not found.

JBO-26012: Invalid View Link Definition "{0}". View Link must have two ViewLinkDefEnds.

Cause: The view link definition in the XML file is missing either the source or destination view link end. For a view link XML file, two elements named ViewLinkDefEnd should be found.

Action: Correct the error in the XML file.

Level: 1

Type: ERROR

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26013: Naming Exception occurred while looking up the object "{0}".

Cause: Meta object name passed for lookup is invalid.

Action: Normally, the meta object name is a dot-separated name of the meta object. For an entity object named Emp in package1.example, the correct name would be <code>package1.example.Emp</code>. To correct, locate where the invalid name is coming from (could be meta object names mentioned in an XML file, or the name of the project, etc.) and change the name to a valid one.

JBO-26019: Attempting to remove a parent entity without removing all children entities Cause: Attempting to remove a master which has detail entities. In the case of a composition, a master cannot be removed if it has details.
Action: Remove all the details of this master by accessing the details via an association and removing all of them.
Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26020: Attempting to insert row with no matching EO base
Cause: The application code tried to take a row from one row set (or view object) and insert it into another row set (view object). In response, the framework will make a copy of the row in the new row set. This new row will share references to the underlying entity objects. However, if the source and destination row sets do not share any entity object bases at all, this operation will fail as it does not find any entity rows to share.
Action: When attempting to take a row from one row set and insert into another, make sure that they share at least one entity object base.
Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26021: NullPointerException while parsing XML file "{0}". Perhaps missing DTD file?
Cause: A NullPointerException was thrown while parsing an XML file. A possible cause for this is that the DTD file is missing (oracle.jbo.dtd.jbo.dtd).
Action: Make sure the appropriate DTD file is present.

JBO-26022: Custom class {0} cannot be found.
Cause: A custom class could not be found and loaded. The custom class might be for a component (for example, view object), a definition (for example, view definition), or a row (for example, view row or entity row).
Action: Make sure that the named class is reachable from the CLASSPATH. The detail exception (if present) provides more specific reasons why the attempt to locate and load the custom class failed.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26023: Custom class {0} is not assignable to {1}
Cause: Custom class was found and loaded, but it is invalid in that it is not assign able to a framework (super) class.
Action: Make sure that the custom class subclasses the appropriate framework (super) class.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR

JBO-26024: An error occurred while creating InitialContext Cause: An error occurred while creating initial context. This error usually carries a detail exception which will give further information on the cause of the error.
Action: When running inside JServer, make sure that the database user (schema) has the setContextClassLoader permission. To grant this, the database system administrator can invoke the following PL/SQL procedure: EXEC DBMS_JAVA.GRANT_PERMISSION('&&1', 'SYS:java.lang.RuntimePermission', 'setContextClassLoader', null);

Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26028: View object {0} does not include a primary key attribute {2} of entity base {1}.
Cause: A view definition does not include a primary key attribute of an entity base. When a view object uses an entity as one of its entity bases, it must include all primary key attributes of the underlying entity object.
Action: Change the view definition to include all primary key attributes.
Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26029: Could not find and load the type map class {0}
Cause: Custom type map class could not be found and loaded.
Action: Make sure that the named class is reachable from the CLASSPATH. If jbo.TypeMapEntries property is specified, make sure that the property value is correct. Also, though unlikely, this might be caused by an improper implementation of SQLBuilder where it is returning an incorrect value for type map class name. The detail exception (if present) will provide more specific reasons why the attempt to locate and load the custom class failed.

Level: 1
Type: ERROR
Impact: Programmatic

JBO-26031: Association end \{0\} of assoc \{1\} invalid for entity base \{2\} in view object \{3\}.

Cause: Problem in secondary entity base definition in view definition. The named entity base is supposed to use the named entity association end to join it with another entity base, but, when resolved with the association definition, the association end does not resolve to the same entity. For example, suppose one builds a view object with Dept and Emp. Emp is supposed to join with Dept using the EmpEnd of the DeptEmp association. For such a view definition, the framework verifies that EmpEnd indeed is from Emp entity. If EmpEnd was from another entity, say Person (or Dept), it would not be correct to use that association end to perform join.

Action: Most commonly, this is caused by incorrect information in the view object XML file. Make sure that the association end for the named entity usage is not pointing at the wrong end of association.

JBO-26035: Secondary entity usage \{0\} is missing parts of association description.

Cause: A view definition is found with an entity usage definition where the secondary entity usage's association description is incomplete.

JBO-26036: The configuration of meta object {0} causes recursive substitution.
Cause: An attempt was made to set up meta object substitution that leads to recursion. For example, consider a substitution where C substitutes B, and B substitutes A, and A substitutes C. This results in a recursive substitution and will cause this error.

Action: Review the meta object substitution and correct errors.

JBO-26037: Cannot find matching EO from discriminator columns for view object {0}, entity base {1}, discr value {2}.
Cause: While creating a new view row, the system found an entity object base with discriminator column attributes. However, the discriminator column values coming from the view row do not match any of the entity objects (the entity for the entity object base or any of its extended entities).

Action: Make sure that the view row discriminator column values match one and only one entity object.

JBO-26039: View object {0} does not include an alternate key attribute {2} of entity base {1}, entity key {3}.
Cause: A view definition does not include an alternate key attribute of an entity base. When a view object uses an entity as one of its entity bases, and when it defines a view object level alternate key using one of the entity alternate keys, it must map the entity attributes that make up the alternate key.
Action: Change the view definition to include all necessary alternate key attributes.

Cause: The client requested to write metaobject, but the metaobject document was updated by another user. The difference between this error and `<code>EXC_PERS_DOC_INCONSISTENT</code>` is that this error is detected by MDS between `<code>getMutableMO()</code>` and `<code>flushChanges()</code>`. `<code>EXC_PERS_DOC_INCONSISTENT</code>` is raised by an MOKey check.

JBO-26083: Comparison operator {0} has a string code for its description, but the message bundle class cannot be found.

Cause: A comparison operator was specified with string code, but the message bundle class could not be loaded. When specifying a string code for translatable operator description, the framework first checks to see if the operator specification includes a message bundle class name. If so, it attempts to find the string in that message bundle. If not, then the framework tries to find the string in the owning object's (either view object or entity object) message bundle. If both fail, this error is raised.

JBO-26086: Association attributes do not match the destination EO's primary keys in EO-exists validator \{0\} of \{1\}.
Cause: The EO-exists validator’s source side attribute list does not match the destination EO’s primary keys. For example, suppose there is a PurchaseOrder EO which includes an EO-exists validator to Customer EO. PurchaseOrder EO is using association CustToPurch to validate. In this case, the association attribute list on the PurchaseOrder side match with Customer’s PK exactly (order does not matter— they must equal as sets).

Action: Correct the error in the XML file.

JBO-26087: The master end accessor {0} of composition assoc {1} has an invalid attribute kind: {2}.

Cause: The composition association’s master end has attribute kind of RowSetIterator (cardinality -1 or > 1), i.e., it returns an iterator, rather than a row.

Action: Master end in an association must return a single row. Thus, the attribute kind must be Row (cardinality = 1).
